Momentum outcome-based investing philosophy

Investment success is about consistently maximising the probability of you achieving your investment goals – whether that is to preserve capital, generate an income stream in retirement or grow wealth within the parameters of a certain risk profile. In response to the ever-evolving investment landscape, we have constructed a range of outcome-based solutions that set their sights beyond mere benchmarks and instead focus on the things that matter the most to you – ensuring we maximise the probability of you achieving your investment goals. Outcome-based investing is about placing your goals at the centre of our investment process.

Investor profile and investment strategy

This portfolio is aimed at investors who are in the accumulation phase of investing. It has a long-term investment horizon and, therefore, the aim is to maintain an average exposure of 79.5% to growth asset classes (local and global equities and property). The portfolio consists of the full universe of asset classes, including global investments of up to 45%. The strategies used include passive, enhanced passive, smart beta and select active investment strategies. The allocation between asset classes is actively managed, taking the market environment into account. Through the optimum selection of asset classes, the probability of achieving the outcome is maximised within acceptable risk parameters. It is suitable as a stand-alone portfolio in retirement products, where compliance with Regulation 28 is specifically required.

Quarterly portfolio commentary for Q2 2025

Markedly higher effective tariffs should negatively impact United States (US) inflation and economic growth going forward, with corresponding adverse read-throughs for US bonds and equities. The US fiscal outlook has also worsened on the back of US President Trump's stimulus package progressing through Congress and a weaker growth outlook. However, this fiscal slippage should be detrimental to US bonds rather than equities. The erratic nature of policy making and disregard for previous alliances and agreements under the current Trump administration have led investors to start questioning the historically perceived security and reliability of the US as an investment destination, particularly considering the large exposures investors have to US assets. New investment flows could thus be less inclined to favour the US as much as in the past, which would be negative for US asset prices and the US dollar but beneficial for the relative performance of emerging market (EM) equities and bonds against their developed market (DM) counterparts. With South African (SA) equities a high-beta play on EM equities and trading at a large valuation discount to EM, we maintain a preference for SA equities. Any renewed interest from foreign investors in the EM equity asset class and by extension under-owned and cheap SA equities in a new Trump world, even if it just culminates in some closing of the SA global EM (GEM) underweight or the taking of some off-benchmark exposure by global funds to SA, would provide significant flow support for SA equities. SA vanilla government bonds still provide some of the highest backward-looking real yields in the world. Positive SA inflation surprises in 2025 and indications from both the SA Treasury and Reserve Bank (SARB) that the country's inflation target would be lowered are fundamentally supporting local nominal bonds but undermining inflation-linked bonds (ILBs). SA cash returns now look less attractive to us than those available from other asset classes. The operating and financial metrics in the SA listed property sector have been improving for some time. The downside potential for SA nominal bond yields should also support valuations in the sector going forward. Heightened fears about overexposure to US dollar assets in the unpredictable Trump era by global central banks and investors alike are likely to continue to support gold demand.

The portfolio benefitted from the allocation to local and global equity as well as local bonds, delivering a return of 7.4% against the benchmark return of 7.3% for the quarter.
